AI Overview

CIF prices for OPGW fittings for G.652 fiber typically depend on supplier, quantity, and shipping location, with cable prices ranging from RMB 10,000 to RMB 30,000 per kilometer as a reference.

Overview of OPGW and G.652 Fittings OPGW (Optical Ground Wire) cables combine optical fibers for telecom purposes with overhead ground wire functionality, often installed on high-voltage power lines. G.652 fibers are standard single-mode fibers widely used in long-distance transmission. Fittings for OPGW include joint boxes, connectors, suspension clamps, dead-end clamps, and accessories designed to match the cable structure and ensure mechanical and electrical reliability.

Price Reference OPGW Cable Pricing: Recent market analysis shows that 24-core G.652 OPGW cables cost around RMB 15,000 per kilometer, while 72-core cables can reach RMB 30,000 per kilometer, depending on material and structural specifications.

Factory Prices: Suppliers in China, such as Huadong Cable, offer 12, 24, and 48-core G.652 OPGW cables at factory prices, which can serve as a baseline for CIF calculations.

Fittings and Accessories: Specialized fittings, including clamps, joint boxes, and connectors, are typically priced separately. Exact CIF pricing depends on order quantity, shipping port, and insurance, and suppliers usually provide quotations upon inquiry.

Factors Affecting CIF Pricing Fiber Core Count: More cores increase both cable and fitting costs. Material Composition: Stainless steel, aluminum-clad steel, and aluminum alloy wires affect durability and price. Cable Structure: Central stainless steel tube, double-layer stranding, and moisture-proofing influence cost. Shipping and Insurance: CIF includes freight and insurance to the destination port, which varies by location and shipping method. Supplier and Order Size: Bulk orders often reduce per-unit cost; OEM/ODM services may add customization fees.
