

Which manufacturers sell mesh cable tray welding machines

AI Overview

Leading manufacturers of mesh cable tray welding machines include DAPU, Clifford, and RKM Machinery, offering high-efficiency, pneumatic or servo-controlled systems for industrial and commercial cable management. DAPU Machinery specializes in pneumatic cable tray mesh welding machines designed for small- to medium-scale production. Their machines, such as the DP-FP-1000A+, can weld two meshes simultaneously with a maximum speed of 120 welds per minute. They incorporate high-quality international components from Siemens, Schneider, and Panasonic, ensuring stable and precise operation. DAPU machines are widely used in construction projects, factories, subway tunnels, airports, hospitals, shopping malls, data centers, and communication rooms. Customization is available for wire diameter, mesh width, and mesh hole size to meet specific production requirements. Clifford Machinery offers fully automatic cable tray mesh welding lines capable of producing multiple types of cable trays, including Lapp welded, T-welded edge wire, and T-welded & crimped edge wire. Their systems feature off-coil line wires, crosswire feeding, and automatic stacking, allowing operation by a single operator. Clifford emphasizes efficiency, rapid changeovers, and reliability, making their machines suitable for high-volume industrial production. RKM Machinery provides cable tray wire mesh welding machines with over 30 years of experience in the field. Their machines use European welding technology and foreign-brand components, achieving up to 120 welds per minute. Features include servo motor and planetary reducer-controlled wire feeding, automatic clamping, and pneumatic welding electrodes. RKM machines are designed for stable operation, precise mesh welding, and improved production efficiency, suitable for industrial pl...
